VOL. VII. NO. 146.

GREENSBORO, N. C. WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1901.

Price Five Cents

FOR A FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY

ONE GENTLEMAN HAS ALREADY GIVEN FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS.

Prof. G. A. Grimsley, Chairman of the State Library Committee, wishes to raise $5,000 in Greensboro for an absolutely free institution.

Prof. G. A. Grimsley, who is Chairman of the Library Committee of the State Literary and Historical Association, will undertake to raise $5,000 to establish a public library for Greensboro. The establishment of libraries throughout the State is one of the objects of the Association. Prof. Grimsley desires to begin at home.

The city aldermen have promised the use of rooms in the new City Hall, and one gentleman in Greensboro has already subscribed $500. Prof. Grimsley expects to receive a number of other large donations, but he expects all of the people here to help according to their ability.

The library will be absolutely free to the use of the people of the city. It is needless to comment on the great value a library would be to this city. As Professor Grimsley rightly said in his report to the Association in Raleigh Monday, the public library is the supplement to the public school. Schools alone cannot educate the people, they must read and educate themselves. The free libraries are great factors in education and in larger cities are considered great institutions for help and enjoyment.

Other North Carolina cities are ahead of Greensboro on this matter and we must catch up. We should be in the lead. While the schools here have their libraries, they are for the exclusive use of the schools, and there are none for the people of the city.

Prof. Grimsley should have no trouble in raising the amount he wishes.

Judge Bynum Entertains.

Judge W. P. Bynum entertained a party of gentlemen at dinner last night, at his residence on Arlington street, complimentary to Judge Timberlake, now holding court here, and Judge W. E. Uhl, of Monticello, Indiana. The other guests were Judge Adams, Mayor Taylor, Messrs. King and Meekins of the Greensboro bar, and Mr. C. R. Brown. An excellent seven course dinner was interspersed with interesting judicial experiences happily told. The remainder of the evening was spent with the Judge and his charming lady in their well filled library, examining the many unique and rare books in the collection. A most enjoyable four hours passed in what seemed a much shorter time.

Coincidences.

In Greensboro there is a most excellent lady who was born the same year in which Queen Victoria was. She was married the same year as the Queen, her children number exactly those of the dead Queen, even to the number of each sex. The lady is now in feeble health. As the coincidences are being talked of they are greatly exaggerated, some saying that the good ladies were even born and married on the same day.

Winston Wants Four.

The Winston Journal says that one of the best things that could be done for its city in the way of small industries is the creation of four small shoe factories. It gives this as the opinion of a gentleman who knows what he is talking of. We expect Greensboro to have that many before another year is gone.

To Sit on Court of Appeals.

It is probable that Judge Jas. E. Boyd will go to Richmond to sit with Judges Goff and Simonton on the Circuit Court of Appeals. He has been asked to go, and it is likely that he will.

Approving Accounts.

Judge Boyd and District Attorney Holton are today going over the accounts of the district for the quarter. It is their duty to canvass and endorse them.

Marshall J. M. Milliken has begun the erection of a handsome residence on Summit Avenue, near Chestnut street.

THE LEGISLATURE TODAY.

Resolutions Regarding Queen Victoria's Death—Joint Session—Declares the Senatorial Vote—Petitions for Compulsory School Law.

Special Dispatch to The Telegram.

Raleigh, Jan. 23.—The Governor reappoints B. S. Royster Adjutant General.

The anti-cigarette bill was re-referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee.

The House and Senate adopted by a rising vote a resolution of sympathy with the family at the death of the Queen. The resolution also congratulates the King of England and expresses the hope that the present relations between this country and England will continue. The Senate ordered the flag placed at half mast.

A bill was introduced in the Senate to allow alimony where there is a divorce from the bonds of matrimony.

Marshall introduced a bill to amend the constitution by ignoring the Negroes and Indians in altering the Senatorial district after 1903, and have each district with an equal number of inhabitants, excluding Negroes, aliens and Indians not taxed.

The bill imposing a graduated tax on corporation charters passed.

In the House.

A petition from the Junior Order of United American Mechanics was presented asking for a compulsory school law.

The bill amending the High Point Graded School act passed final reading.

Joint Session.

At a joint session of the House and Senate the vote for Senator was announced. It was, Simmons 124, Pearson 26. The President of the Senate declared Simmons duly elected. Senators Glenn, Winston and Jones were appointed to notify him. Senator Simmons came to the hall and made a brief speech. He was loudly applauded and congratulated.

MR. LOGAN MARRIED.

The Event, Which Happened a Week Ago, Just Made Known.

This afternoon Mr. J. A. Logan, Office Deputy Marshal in Marshal Millikan's office, received a telegram from Asheville saying:

"All is known, and is satisfactory. Come at once."

It came from a friend, and Mr. Logan was not long in explaining to the boys in the office why this telegram affected him. Until he explained, not a soul knew that he had been married.

The romantic event occurred on the 15th. The bride was Miss Kate Patterson, of Asheville, a niece of Mr. A. C. Patterson of the revenue service at this place. It occurred in the study of Rev. Mr. Vines, who performed the ceremony, and was kept a profound secret. The bride is one of the best known young ladies of Asheville.

Mr. Logan will start for Asheville tonight to claim his wife. The boys of the marshal's office have been about to lynch him this afternoon for fooling them. When he came from Asheville last Friday he took them all into his confidence and told them that he was to be married March first.

Roller Mills at Liberty.

Mr. A. J. Paterson, of Liberty, was in the city this morning on business for the Liberty Milling Company. This company is just preparing to put in machinery for roller mills. The capacity will be fifty barrels per day. They expect to have the mill in operation in about a month.

Court.

The special term of court will last four weeks. Some of the cases are consuming much time. Judge Timberlake has another court on the 11th, and therefore has to close here on the 9th, otherwise, it might last longer.

THE STORY OF DEATH

VICTORIA IN HER LAST HOURS

THE FIRST ILLNESS IN ALL OF HER EIGHTY-ONE YEARS.

Only Last Week She Called Lord Roberts and Asked Him Searching Questions on the South African War—The Emperor of Germany Consoles and Congratulates the King of England.

Cowes, Jan. 22.—Queen Victoria is dead and Edward VII reigns. The greatest event in the memory of this generation, the most stupendous change in existing conditions that could possibly be imagined, has taken place quietly, almost gently, upon the anniversary of the death of Queen Victoria's father, the Duke of Kent. The end of this career, never equalled by any woman in the world's history, came in a simply furnished room in Osborne House. This most respected of all women, living or dead, lay in a great four-posted bed and made a shrunken atom whose aged face and figure were a cruel mockery of the fair girl who in 1837 began to rule over England.

Around her were gathered almost every descendant of her line. Well within view of her dying eyes, there hung a portrait of the Prince Consort. It was he who designed the room and every part of the castle. In scarcely audible words; the white-haired bishop of Winchester prayed beside her as he had often prayed with his sovereign, for he was her chaplain at Windsor. With bowed heads the imperious ruler of the German empire and the man who now is King of England, the woman who has succeeded to the title of Queen, the Princes and Princesses, and those of less than royal distinction, listened to the bishop's ceaseless prayer. Six o'clock passed. The bishop continued his intercession. One of the younger children asked a question in shrill, childish treble and was immediately silenced. The women of this royal family sobbed faintly and the men shuffled uneasily.

While the Bishop Was Praying.

At exactly half past six o'clock, Sir James Reid held up his hand, and the people in the room knew that England had lost her Queen. The bishop pronounced the benediction. The Queen passed away quite peacefully. She suffered no pain. Those who were now mourners went to their rooms. A few moments later the inevitable element of materialism stepped into this pathetic chapter of international history, for the court ladies went busily to work ordering their mourning from London. The wheels of the world were jarred when the announcement came, but in this palace at Osborne everything pursued the usual course. Down in the kitchen they were cooking a huge dinner for an assemblage, the like of which has been seldom known in England, and the dinner preparations proceeded just as if nothing had happened.

The Body Embalmed.

The body of Queen Victoria was embalmed and will probably be taken to Windsor Saturday. The coffin arrived last evening from London. An incident characteristic of the Queen's solicitude for others occurred two days ago, when, in one of the intervals of consciousness, she summoned strength to suggest to her dressers, who had been acting as nurses, to take the opportunity of getting some fresh air. Monday afternoon she asked that her little Pomeranian spaniel be brought to her bedside.

The Last Hours.

It was feared that the Queen was dying about 9 o'clock in the morning and carriages were sent to Osborne cottage and the rectory to bring all the Princes and Princesses and the bishop of Winchester to her bedside. It seemed then very near the end, but, when things looked the worst, the Queen had one of her rallies, due to her wonderful constitution, opened her eyes and recognized the Prince of Wales, the Princess and Emperor William. She asked to see one of her faithful servants, a member of the household. He hastened to the room, but before he got there the Queen had passed into a fitful sleep. Four o'clock marked the beginning of the end. Again the family were summoned and this time the relapse was not followed by recovery. The Prince of Wales was very much affected when the doctors at last informed him that his mother had breathed her last. Emperor William, himself deeply affected, did his best to minister comfort to his sorrow-stricken uncle, whose new dignity he was the first to acknowledge.

Sympathy of the World.

From all parts of the world there are still pouring into Cowes messages of condolence. They came from crowned heads, millionaires, tradesmen and paupers, and are variously addressed to the Prince of Wales and the King of England. Emperor William's arrangements are not settled. His yacht will arrive here today (Wednesday) but it is believed that he will not depart until after the funeral. Several other royal personages are likely to be present at the funeral, which probably will be a ceremony never to be equalled in this century.

Last Days of Her Reign.

The record of the last days of the reign of Victoria is not easy to tell. The correspondent of the Associated Press was the only correspondent admitted to Osborne House, and his interview with Sir Arthur John Rigge, private secretary to the late Queen, was the only official statement that had been given, out. For several weeks the Queen had been failing. On Monday week she summoned Lord Roberts and asked him some very searching questions regarding the war in South Africa. On Tuesday she went for a drive, but was visibly affected. On Wednesday she suffered a paralytic stroke, accompanied by intense physical weakness. It was her first illness in all her 81 years, and she would not admit it. Then her condition grew so serious that, against her wishes, the family were summoned. When they arrived her reason had practically succumbed to paralysis and weakness. The events of the last few days are well known. At the lodge gates the watchers waited nervously. Suddenly along the drive from the house came a horseman, who said: "The Queen is dead!" as he dashed through the crowds. Then down the hill rushed a myriad of messengers. Soon the surrounding country knew that a King ruled over Great Britain. The local inhabitants walked as if in a dream through the streets of Cowes, but they did not hesitate to stop and drink the health of the new monarch.

The Announcement to the Crowd at the Gates.

Osborne House Gates, Jan. 22, 7:05 p. m.—When the 4 p. m., bulletin announced that the Queen was sinking, all the watchers at the gates of Osborne House made up their minds to remain to the end. The cold was intense. A few favored ones sought shelter in the royal lodge, just inside, where they waited in absolute silence. The telephone bell rang at 7:04 p. m., but before a royal servant had time to take the message the chief of the Queen's police emerged from the darkness, and, with bare head, said: "Gentlemen, the Queen passed away at 6:30."

All present reverently uncovered and then shrill whistles and the ringing of the bells of the bicycles in waiting were the signals for messengers to race to Cowes with the news. In a few moments the place was deserted. Simultaneously mounted messengers on white horses dashed from Osborne.

Enoch Arden at Wilmington.

Wilmington Star.

The Olmsted-Potwin-Breneman Company appeared at the Y. A. C. A. last evening before one of the largest audiences ever assembled in the auditorium. The program of music, recitation and reading was admirably presented. "The Kitchen Clock," a recitation by Miss Breneman, was splendid and the audience responded with delighted applause. Her reading of "Enoch Arden," with the piano and violin accompaniment by Mr. Olmsted and Miss Potwin, respectively, was dramatic and carried with it a feeling and pathos of that beautiful but sad psalm. Miss Gertrude Miriam Potwin's selections on the violin were very good and she fully sustained her reputation as being a true artist with the bow. The performance was the third attraction in the Popular Course and was well received.

EDWARD VII BECOMES KING.

TOOK THE OATH OF OFFICE AT NOON AND MADE A SPEECH.

Among Those Present With the Privy Council Was Lord Rosebery—Sympathy and Congratulations from All Over the World—The Queen's Body Will Lie in State.

By Wire to The Telegram.

London, Jan. 23.—King Edward VII took the oath of office today and then presided over the meeting of the Privy Council at St. James' Palace at 2 p. m. to attend which he and the Duke of York, the Duke of Connaught and Honorable A. J. Balfour, first Lord of the Treasury left Cowes and arrived in London. Parliament met and the Lords and Commons took the oath of allegiance to the new ruler.

The new King was formally proclaimed at Temple Bar, St. Paul's Cathedral, and from the steps of the Royal Exchange. Further proclamations will be made officially in all the colonies.

The body of the Queen has been embalmed and will be placed in a coffin sent from London.

King Albert Edward was sworn in as Edward VII, King of Great Britain and Ireland and Emperor of India. The King arrived in London from Cowes about noon. The route of the journey from Osborne House to Trinity Pier was deserted except for a few groups of bareheaded persons, when the three carriages containing the royal party, drawn by white horses, galloped down the hill. In the first carriage was the King, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of York and Prince Christian. The King looked well and bowed in repeated acknowledgment of the greetings. As the Alberta Yacht started signals were shown that indicated that no salutes were to be fired. The crews of the Australia and other royal yachts were mustered as the Alberta steamed past. The Alberta returned to be in readiness to convey the Queen's body to the mainland. The King and the Duke of York will return to Osborne House tonight.

The Cabinet Renewed.

King Edward VII, after being sworn in, eloquently addressed the privy councillors. All the members of the cabinet gave up their seals of office. The King immediately returned them to them. Among those present was Lord Rosebery, formerly the Liberal premier, and one of the King's closest friends.

Norfolk Sympathizers.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 23.—Resolutions of sorrow at the death of the Queen were adopted at a meeting of British residents here, and flags were half masted on the steamers of all nationalities.

Jamaica Loyal.

Kingston, Jamaica, Jan. 23.—Never before has there been such a display of loyalty to the British throne. The entire population is in mourning and business is suspended everywhere.

In Egypt.

Alexandria, Egypt, Jan. 23.—The sympathy of people of all nationalities at death of the queen is very marked, business is suspended and flags half masted.

Informal Reception.

An informal reception to Rev. S. R. Guingnard, of Union, S. C., will be given tomorrow afternoon from four to seven by the congregation of St. Andrew's Episcopal church at the residence of Judge W. P. Bynum, on Arlington street. All the members of the congregation are expected to be present.

Rev. Mr. Guingnard arrived on the noon train today.

To Close Tonight.

The protracted meeting at the First Presbyterian church will close tonight with a Congregational Praise Meeting, to which the entire congregation is warmly invited.

TWO PHILADELPHIA TRAGEDIES.

BY WHICH A MAN AND A WOMAN WERE KILLED, ANOTHER WOUNDED.

Put a Pistol in His Wife's Mouth and Shot Her to Death—Boy Shoots a Girl for Discarding Him.

Philadelphia Record.

Bloody tragedies were enacted almost simultaneously last evening in different sections of the city, as a result of which a man and a woman met violent deaths and another woman is dangerously wounded in a hospital. Crazy because his passionate love was not returned, Romeo Helms, of Oak Lane, an employe of Thompson's Spa, No. 712 Chestnut street, shot and wounded Clara Nichols, fired at her companion, Gertrude Bartlett, and then shot himself, dying in a few minutes. But a few minutes later, at No. 2619 East Thompson street, John Toomey placed a revolver in his wife's mouth and blew the top of her head off.

Both Helms and the two girls he tried to kill were employed as helpers in the Spa kitchen, and the shooting occurred at the rear entrance on Ionic street. Helms had not been at work yesterday, but, knowing when Miss Nichols was in the habit of leaving, he lay in wait for her when she started for home shortly after 5 o'clock.

The two had just passed out the door, when Helms jumped from behind a telephone pole and exclaimed: "I've got you now, Clara. You can't get away this time."

Both girls screamed, but before they could start to run Helms fired twice at Miss Nichols, one ball striking her shoulder-blade and the other entering her right side.

Before turning the weapon on himself Helms fired at Miss Bartlett, but fear lent her wings, and she sped away, and, dodging, escaped the bullet, and turning into an open doorway fell in a faint behind a counter.

Helms then fired the two remaining bullets at himself. The first struck a suspender buckle and glanced off, but the second penetrated just above the heart. The shots were heard by Policeman Joseph Davis, of the Nineteenth district, who was on Eighth street, and who ran to the spot. He found the wounded girl unconscious and profusely bleeding from the wounds in her back, while Helms lay gasping, with the revolver still in his hand. As the officer raised his head from the muddy pavement he moaned and spoke the name of "Clara," and then expired in the policeman's arms.

The wounded girl was hurried to the Pennsylvania Hospital, where it was found that while her injuries were serious, her recovery was probable. The bullet in the shoulder was extracted without great difficulty, but the lower one could not be found. Later on her injuries took on a more serious turn and last night she was partially paralyzed.

Killed His Wife.

While temporarily insane, according to all accounts, John Toomey, a bartender, instantly killed his wife, Annie, by shooting her in the mouth and back at their home, No. 2619 East Thompson street, early last evening. Then returning to his work within 20 minutes, he drank two glasses of seltzer water and coolly remarked to his friends: "I've killed my wife; what will I do?"

Policeman William Jones, McCann and Anderson took him in custody, and he was locked up at the Eleventh district police station. He told Lieutenant Tuttle that he had had a disagreement with his wife, and he "thought she was going to do me up, so I did her up first." He wouldn't tell the lieutenant whether it was jealousy or what caused prompted the deed.

But a Few Months Married.

On September 10 last Toomey married Miss Annie McGrath at her home, in Newark, N. J. Then they moved into their nicely-furnished Thompson street home. Apparently their life was a happy one, although recently Toomey's friends have remarked that he was acting queerly and seemed to be brooding over something. A short time ago his wife went back to her Newark home because of his strange actions, but recently returned.

Deranged from Fear of Small-pox.

Winston Journal.

Register of Deeds Lindsay received a message this afternoon from Kernersville requesting him to telephone to Dr. W. P. Dicks at Walkertown to come to Kernersville to see his sister Mrs. Nattie Kerner who had become deranged.

Mrs. Kerner has for the past several days been attending her nephew, Charlie Kerner, who has the smallpox. It seems that as she is a frail woman, the strain was too much for her and she broke down and could not restrain her feelings.

Mrs. Kerner is a very estimable woman and all will extend sympathy in this sad experience.

THE STORY OF DEATH.

On their arrival at Cowes, the correspondents found that the news was known both at East and West Cowes 15 minutes before it had been announced to those in waiting at the gates of Osborne. The streets were filled with sorrowful crowds.

The Queen's Farewell to Her Family.

Cowes, Jan. 22.—The Queen is said to have bid farewell in a feeble monosyllable to her family, assembled at her bedside, at midday. She first recognized the Prince of Wales, to whom she spoke a few words of great moment, then Emperor William and the others present filed past and heard a whispered good-bye. All those in the bedroom were in tears.

With the members of the royal family gathered at the Queen's bedside, the bishop of Winchester and the rector of Whippingham had read prayers for those in extremis. Naturally, the family insist that the details of the events around the death-bed shall be strictly secret on the whole household.

Interest in the New Reign.

London, Jan. 23, 1:05 a. m.—Absolute silence reigned tonight in the vicinity of Buckingham Palace and Marlborough House. A small bill, signed "Balfour," was posted outside, announcing the demise of the monarch. Everywhere tonight the one topic of conversation was as to what would happen under the new reign. Much interest was evinced in the way in which the enormous fortune of the dead Queen would be distributed, the general notion being that Osborne House would go to Princess Beatrice, and that she and Princess Christian would come into a considerable portion of Victoria's wealth. The probability that King Edward will take up a practically permanent residence in Buckingham Palace was much canvassed. This is a question that comes very much home to Londoners. Queen Victoria's preference for Balmoral Castle and Osborne House has been a complaint of long standing in the metropolis, and it is hoped that the new reign will see a change in this respect. The presence of the court in London would give brightness and gaiety which have long been absent.

Not until Queen Victoria has been laid to rest beside the Prince Consort at Frogmore will the theatres or music halls re-open. Moreover, business will come to a practical standstill. The music in all the hotels and public places has ceased. Fashionable resorts are empty and very few of the nightly habitues are in evidence. The St. James, Princess and other prominent restaurants have already discarded alluring colors for sombre black.

Americans who have passed through great national calamities may recall the crepe-draped buildings and the national hush, but they can ill conceive, since the death of Lincoln, any such expression of gloom as has fallen on the United Kingdom. Marlborough House, so long the home of the new monarch, Buckingham Palace, where Queen Victoria made her last stay in London, and St. James' Palace, the residence of so many former monarchs, were all black and deserted. Sentries in black overcoats kept silent vigil before the closed gates and bolted doors.

Shortly before midnight an official announcement was issued calling Parliament to assemble at 4 o'clock this (Wednesday) afternoon, to enable the members of the House of Lords and House of Commons to take the oath of allegiance to King Edward VII.

Telegrams arriving from all parts of the country re-echo the deep feeling of sorrow prevailing all classes. These show that everywhere bells have been tolled and public performances and private functions suspended. In Dublin the expressions of regret were unithedral were tolled. Earl Cadogan, the Lord Lieutenant, was absent from Dublin yesterday, but it is expected that he will return immediately to preside at a meeting at which the Irish privy council will proclaim the new King.

The privy council will meet in London today, and the proclamation of the King will occur thereafter at all places required by custom. The King will come to London to preside over the council.

Body to Lie in State.

Throughout the night the body of the Queen lay in the same bed where she died. It was guarded by six metropolitan policemen. The tapers burned dimly, and flowers gathered from the Osborne conservatories surrounded the bed. The body will be removed to Westminster Abbey tomorrow, where it will lie in state.

Grief and Mourning.

There are universal signs of grief and mourning of both a public and private character in the city today. The subdued demeanor of the public in the streets is particularly noticeable. Their grief is outwardly indicated by a general display of black neckwear and other sombre habiliments and the absence of all color in their dress. Minute bells continue to toll throughout the city and all flags are half masted. Most of the drivers on the streets display crepe notes and carpenters are generally busy putting up black shutters.

IT SAVED HIS LEG.

P. A. Danforth, of LaGrange, Ga., suffered intensely for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg, but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in ten days. "For ulcers, wounds, burns, boils, pain or piles it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25 cents. Sold by C. E. Holton druggist."

The most soothing, healing and antiseptic application ever devised is DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It relieves at once and cures piles, sores, eczema and skin diseases. Beware of imitations. Howard Gardner.

BISMARCK'S IRON NERVE

Was the result of his splendid health. Indomitable will and tremendous energy are not found where stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels are out of order. If you want these qualities and the success they bring, use Dr. King's New Life Pills. They develop every power of brain and body. Only 25c at C. E. Holton's drug store.

Pepsin preparations often fail to relieve indigestion because they can digest only albuminous foods. There is one preparation that digests all classes of food, and that is Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. It cures the worst cases of indigestion and gives instant relief, for it digests what you eat. Howard Gardner.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23

SUBJECT TO MISCONCEPTION.

The Telegram recognizes in the cotton mills of North Carolina a blessing in the past and a large section of hope for the future prosperity of the State. At the same time it recognizes the fact that cotton mills are not built for philanthropic purposes, but for the profit for those who build them. This is right, and does not lessen the value of the incidental good they do. We believe that the majority of the mill owners want to do the right thing. All of them would be more than mortal if there were not some few, at least, among them who did not want to do the right thing. Therefore, there should be no objection to framing into law the voluntary agreement of the mill owners. Why they object to this, we cannot see. That such objection subjects them to criticism we see from different articles in the papers, notably this one from the Springfield, Massachusetts, Republican:

Forty of the leading cotton mill owners of North Carolina have signed a remarkable agreement, and are trying to secure the signatures of other mill owners in the State. This agreement provides that after March 1, next, 66 hours shall constitute a maximum week's work; that no child of less than 12 years shall be employed in a cotton mill during a school term, except children of widows and disabled parents, and that no child under 10 years of age shall be employed in a cotton mill at any time.

The cause of this agreement is the existence of a popular movement in North Carolina to secure legislation prohibiting the employment of children below a certain age, and the agreement is conditioned on the refusal of the Legislature to interfere. The mill men, in a word, are willing to make some voluntary concessions in the matter of child labor in order to avert legislative intervention on a more radical scale. It is apparent, therefore, considering the specifications of the agreement, that the cotton mills of North Carolina have been employing children under 12 years of age in and out of school hours whenever such labor is obtainable; that they have been employing children under 10 years of age, and that they have been working the children fully 11 hours a day. But if the Legislature will let them alone, they agree to cease the exploitation of child labor under 10 years, and to work other children no more than 11 hours a day outside of school hours—retaining the right to use the labor of the children of widows and other unfortunate people within school hours. But why should the mills object to legislation, which will protect the children, since such legislation will place them all on terms of equality, one with another?

The mill men ask that no legislation be passed at this session, implying that some later session will be more opportune. Legislation was postponed in 1897 because of the hard times and the inability of the mills to then stand any reduction in hours of labor. It would seem that the mills are now as prosperous as they can reasonably ever hope to be, and, beside that, certainly a statute enforcing upon all what a portion have volunteered to do could be no hardship, at least upon those agreeing to it and who object to the legislation. We do not impugn the motives of the mill men. Among our very best citizens they are peers. But we doubt the wisdom and even expediency of what they ask. We hope the Legislature, taking into consideration what the mill men say, which, according to all the processes of human thought and action, is ex parte, and, also, hearing the other side, enact a conservative and fair statute.

THE AMIABILITY OF MR. DANA.

Folks are always stumbling upon information which leads them to believe that their set opinions about men, especially, are often erroneous. For instance, we had always thought from reading the New York Sun in Mr. Dana's life time that the epithet of "Old Vitriol," applied to him by the Charlotte Observer, must be an exact description of his character. But in the Youths' Companion we find an article on Mr. Dana by Amos J. Cummings, the congressman and well known newspaper correspondent, in which the following occurs:

Rarely did Mr. Dana get into a passion. He had wonderful self-control. At times there were most exasperating incidents in his editorial life. He showed no annoyance, but with a face as mild as a summer morn would give a low whistle, look reflectively over the top of his spectacles and say, "Well, I think we had better do so and so," indicating the proper course to pursue. Before the words were finished he would bend over his table and resume his work. For four years I never heard him use a harsh word. He seemed to have a keen appreciation of the fact that others, as well as he, were having a hard time in life.

Mr. Cummings was galley boy on The Tribune when Mr. Dana was its managing editor, and, afterwards, for a long time, managing editor of Mr. Dana's own creation, The Sun. He therefore must know what he is talking of. And we, therefore, must have been mistaken in thinking that the recklessly severe style and the extremely harsh words and snappish phrases of The Sun were a reflection of the editor's own character. They must have been adopted as a deliberate policy, for Mr. Dana absolutely moulded the paper and his impress is yet upon it.

With the voluntary promise of the West Point cadets to quit hazing, the discussion of the brutality of the practice will doubtless stop. There really was more fuss raised over it than it demanded. The boys were perhaps given a pretty tough time in their first years, but it is noticeable that they didn't refrain, on becoming higher class men, to administer the same doses they had received. We venture none of them got more than he would have been applauded by the public for receiving in a football game. But then the public would have had the opportunity to see and enjoy that, while the pummelings of the cadets were hid away among the hills of the Hudson.

The King of England parts his hair in the middle. The boys may now continue their custom along this line with complacency.

Eaten by Rats.

Chicago Dispatch 21st.

With her face mangled beyond recognition and the flesh of her hands and feet eaten by rats, Mrs. Nora Hannigan was found dead on the floor of her home, 33 Sennot place. The rings from her fingers were found scattered about the floor where they had rolled when gnawed off by the rats that infested the house and were rapidly eating the decomposed body.

YANKEE SILVER KING

The most successful North American in Chili, and probably the wealthiest of all the Yankees who have sought fortune in the southern continent is George B. Chace, known in the mineral markets of the world as Chili's silver king, writes Douglas White, in Ainslee's.

But Mr. Chace was not always a Croesus. Thirty-five years ago he left California after a long and futile search for a paying prospect. In 1865 he landed at Iquique, Peru. From there he went to Tarapaca, Chili, where he got work in the nitrate beds. He made friends with old Padre Miguel, who read mass in the little church at Pozo Almonte, a little town in the interior, surrounded by the great nitrate deposits. The priest taught Chace the Spanish language and helped him to acquire an acquaintance with the geography of the locality. As soon as Chace had laid aside sufficient from his earnings he would start on a prospecting tour. For nine years he searched and toiled in vain. Chace was beginning to lose heart. One day when he was talking to Padre Miguel about his luck, the old priest told him of a wonderful silver mine in the neighborhood that had been worked by the Spaniards a hundred years before. "Where was this wonderful mine?" was Chace's first query. And the old priest told of its location somewhere in the northwest of Pozo Almonte, exactly where Miguel could not say, but if memory served him rightly, there was among the archives of the little church a map of the mine's location. The Spanish discoverers in their gratitude had given to the church an interest in their fortunate find, and with much devotion christened it "El Minas de San Pedro y San Pablo" (the Mine of St. Peter and St. Paul).

The following day from the old church's archives was brought an old sheet of parchment, yellow with age, traced with the rough outline of a mining location. Down in the corner were the names of the original owners, the date of discovery, and the dedication of a portion of the mine's production to the church. One line and only one, gave anything like a distinct clew by which the mine might be traced, and that was a straggling mark stated to be the road to Huantajaya.

Chace presented a request for a tracing of the map, the padre accommodated him, and with the next dawn the prospector was away on his search.

The antique map makers had drafted better than first appearances indicated, and, further to aid the seeker after wealth, there had been no change in the trail leading from Huantajaya past the mine's location. Fortune was at last with the Yankee miner. Inside of three days his pick was delving into the abandoned and forgotten pile of tailings. The mine itself was uncovered from the midst of a thick growth of underbrush. Delirious with his great find, Chace made his way back to Pozo Almonte and thence to the coast.

An assay proved that the half-worked tailings of the San Pedro y San Pablo were richer than many original discoveries, and it was not a hard matter to secure the required capital for working the find. But the good fortune did not end in the pile of tailings. With his now plentiful supply of money, Chace reopened the mine itself, and with little trouble picked up the lost lead. For years the once abandoned property has paid sums even more fabulous than in the days when the Spaniards crushed their ores under the pressure of patient burros' hoofs and stamp mills were unknown even to the inventive American.

The relocation of San Pedro y San Pablo was but the beginning of the Chace millions, for in the past 25 years he has located several properties which have rivaled the old Spanish find. Among these may be mentioned the Descubridora and San Augustin mines in the interior of the province of Antofagasta, both of which have yielded millions. His latest enterprise is a bunch of claims in what is known as the Chuquibambilla, a wonderfully rich mineral district well back in the mountains of Antofagasta. These claims promise to be the richest of the Chace properties when their extent is considered, as they number 20 claims in all.

With all this good fortune, Chili's silver king has not been allowed to accumulate his millions in peace. First came the change in government, when the province of Tarapaca passed from the hands of Peru into those of Chili at the settlement of the devastating war between these two republics. This meant an overhauling of titles and consequent disputes. One of these centered on Chace's properties, with the result that he has during the last 12 years spent more time in the courts of Chili than he has at mining, and after a long, tedious legal battle has at last wiped out any possible question against his ownership. Meanwhile his great properties have been producing wealth, and in spite of the fact that a Chilean lawsuit is even more expensive than a struggle of the same kind in the United States, he has placed to his credit with English bankers a fortune estimated to exceed $500,000.

BAD BLOOD,
BAD COMPLEXION.

The skin is the seat of an almost endless variety of diseases. They are known by various names, but are all due to the same cause, acid and other poisons in the blood that irritate and interfere with the proper action of the skin.

To have a smooth, soft skin, free from all eruptions, the blood must be kept pure and healthy. The many preparations of arsenic and potash and the large number of face powders and lotions generally used in this class of diseases cover up for a short time, but cannot remove permanently the ugly blotches and the red, disfiguring pimples.

Eternal vigilance is the price of a beautiful complexion when such remedies are relied on.

Mr. H. T. Shobe, 2704 Lucas Avenue, St. Louis, Mo., says: "My daughter was afflicted for years with a disfiguring eruption on her face, which resisted all treatment. She was taken to two celebrated health springs, but received no benefit. Many medicines were prescribed, but without result, until we decided to try S. S. S., and by the time the first bottle was finished the eruption began to disappear. A dozen bottles cured her completely and left her skin perfectly smooth. She is now seventeen years old, and not a sign of the embarrassing disease has ever returned."

S. S. S. is a positive, unfailing cure for the worst forms of skin troubles. It is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and the only one guaranteed purely vegetable.

Bad blood makes bad complexions.

SSS purifies and invigorates the old and makes new, rich blood that nourishes the body and keeps the skin active and healthy and in proper condition to perform its part towards carrying off the impurities from the body. If you have Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Psoriasis, or your skin is rough and pimply, send for our book on Blood and Skin Diseases and write our physicians about your case. No charge whatever for this service.

NO RIGHT TO UGLINESS

The woman who is lovely in face form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep her health. If she is weak, sickly and run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation or kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. Electric bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and to purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good-looking, charming woman of a run-down invalid. Only 50 cents at C. E. Holton's drug store.

COKE
UNIVERSALLY ADMIRER

Public Seems Quick to Appreciate the Honest Efforts of the A. R. Bremer Co

MERIT ALONE, BACKED UP BY INDISPUTABLE PROOF, IS THEIR MOTTO.

A FAIR AND OPEN TEST OF THEIR GREAT CURE THEY NOT ONLY COURT BUT DEMAND.

Two full days the papers of Greensboro gave public notice that the proprietors of Coke Dandruff Cure would, if their claims could be substantiated, revolutionize the treatment of dandruff and all hair and scalp troubles, and that the public might be given the benefit of this remedy without cost. They were not only asked but urged to step into John B. Fariss' drug store or send a request and get a free sample bottle.

In this open way everybody would be enabled to form their own judgment as to the value of Coke Dandruff Cure. The free test called for no restrictions. Physicians were not barred; in fact they were welcomed, and as still further proof of this, while the free distribution ended at John B. Fariss' drug store on Saturday, A. R. Bremer Company's representative will even now be glad to furnish free, to all physicians who apply, a sufficient quantity of Coke Dandruff Cure to make such tests as in their judgment may seem necessary. Coke Dandruff Cure is guaranteed to cure dandruff, falling hair, and is the best tonic in the world today.

His Family Specter

"BY JOVE, Gordon, I don't know what to make of you!" exclaimed Tom Fairleigh, drawing on his gloves with considerable show of vexation. "Amy Hepburn's happiness is dear to me. In fact, I came here to-night to tell you that I love her—" "To tell me!" broke in Gordon. "Why don't you tell her?"

"Wait—can't you? Let me finish. I have told her, and she has declined me. It was done very gently and with the greatest possible regard for my feelings, but nevertheless I was mortified. Don't think me a fool because I come here and make a confession which can be nothing less than mortifying. I'm doing it for Amy's sake."

"For Amy's sake?" echoed Gordon. "Yes; I want to see her happy, and you are the man to make her so. She declined me on your account. Of course I knew long ago that you were my rival, but did not know until two hours ago that you were the successful one. You aren't worthy of her and don't deserve her, but don't think for a moment that I believe myself more worthy or more deserving." Pausing suddenly, Farleigh walked to his friend's side and laid a hand on his shoulder. "I can't understand what you mean by leading Amy to believe that you care for her while all the time dividing your attention with Nell Forthdyke. Would you be inhuman enough to break a heart as loyal as Amy's?"

"Don't get tragic, Tom. I'm not going to break anybody's heart. Nell is rich, you know—"

"And so are you," sneered Farleigh, walking hurriedly to the door and laying his hand on the knob. "But Amy Hepburn is poor. Society dares you to wed with poverty. If you love Amy, are you man enough to dare? Examine into the financial condition of the Hepburns, reflect upon what caused their downfall in fortune and then let me see if you are strong enough to leap this Brahminical barrier of caste."

With this parting shot Farleigh passed quickly out of the room and slammed the door behind him. Harry Gordon gave vent to a long whistle, settled himself back in a chair and thoughtfully lighted a cigar.

"That was quite a jolt," he muttered, looking upward through the curling wreaths of smoke. "How happy could I be with either, were I other charmer away! It's as sure as can be that I love one and fancy the other. But who will unravel this Gordian knot? Which is it to be—Amy or Nell?"

A knock fell on the door, not on the outside door, but on a door leading into a closet. Harry Gordon stirred uncomfortably in his chair, a vexed look coming into his eyes as he fixed them upon the closet door. After a brief interval of silence the knock was repeated.

"Now, what in the world aroused you?" cried Gordon.

"Business is business," came a hollow voice from the other side of the closet door. "I'm here for a purpose, and if I do not make that purpose manifest once in awhile you'll forget all about me."

This remark was followed by a clanking, cachinnatory outburst that seemed to grate harshly on Gordon's ear.

"Well, what do you want?" he asked.

"I want to come out and show myself. You know I'm here, but a little ocular demonstration won't come amiss. I take it. Remember, I'm showing consideration for you. I might have kicked open this door and stalked out into the room. But I didn't. I rapped."

"Can't you put it off? Come out to-morrow. I've got something else to think about now."

"The high and mighty order of family skeletons are not in the habit of playing second fiddle or taking back seats for anybody. I'm coming at once."

"All right, then," groaned Gordon, squaring himself about in his chair. "Come on."

The closet door flew open and a well-developed skeleton strode out and dropped with a rattle into a chair. The cavernous eyes were blankly expressive—to Gordon. For him also there was something sarcastic in the grin of the fleshless jaws. "Dust me off," said the skeleton. "I want to show up as frightful as possible to-night."

The request presented itself to Gordon as a command which he was powerless to disobey. Picking up a feather duster, he plied it vigorously about the gleaming white bones.

"Achoo!" he sneezed, dropping the duster and falling into his chair.

"You ought not to neglect me," said the skeleton. "I'm one of the family and should be treated as such. Now, then, let's have a chat."

The skeleton crossed his bony legs and settled back comfortably.

"Will it do me any good to have a chat with you?" queried Gordon.

"That remains to be seen. It used to do your father good. Why, it was my custom to visit him every night. As he sat before that table writing I'd sneak out of that closet, come quietly up behind him and put an arm caressingly around his neck." The skeleton laughed, working his bony jaws with a succession of crackling sounds that made Gordon shiver. "How it used to startle him! He would turn white as a sheet as he looked up into my face. Once he sprang to his feet in desperation, and we had a wrestle all about the room, overturning chairs, tables and everything else that came in our way."

"You succeeded in shortening my father's life," returned Gordon, gloomily. "Under your tyranny he sank into his grave long before his time."

"So he did, so he did, and he passed me on to you with the rest of his property, real and personal. It was a rich inheritance, my dear boy, even though I had to be dragged at its heels. Yet don't accuse me of any responsibility for your father's taking off. He was the author of my existence. Like Frankenstein, he built me up bone by bone, and was not content until he had made a gigantic monster and had breathed into my bony breast the breath of life. Then, in order that I might not afflict his sight, he stowed me away in that closet. Suppose I became the instrument of his own undoing. Is it not true that he was, nevertheless, the author of his own downfall?"

"Your logic seems to me as merciless as it is correct," answered Gordon, with knitted brows. "Still there are some points relating to your history on which my mind is a trifle obscure. What possessed my father to call into being a creature of your disagreeable character?"

"The almighty dollar, young man. He created me in order that you might inherit a little more wealth. He did not think then how I should one day sit astride his shoulders like the Old Man of the Sea, nor did he think that it was possible for me to afflict his son. For obvious reasons my relations with you are not so intimate as they were with your worthy father. I was evolved out of the wheat pit of the board of trade. Your father was a bull, and he mercilessly gored both life and fortune out of a certain bear who was not nimble enough to get out of his way."

"And who was this bear?" asked Gordon.

"A man named Hepburn," murmured the young man, rubbing his hand across his brow in an effort to remember.

"Yes, Hepburn lost every penny he had in the world through that disastrous wheat deal. He was forced into bankruptcy, and, unable to bear the disgrace, took his own life. His money went to increase the store your father left you, my boy, and it is now possible for you to live in luxury while Hepburn's wife and children must struggle on as best they can. However, and the skeleton got up and started back to its closet, "it is not for me to moralize. Now that I've caught myself delivering a homily I'll just take my departure. Au revoir, my dear fellow!"

Halting at the closet door, the skeleton waved its adieu and disappeared within. Gordon sat in his chair, deep in thought, while his cigar burned itself out between his fingers.

At last he got up and shook his broad shoulders as though freeing himself from a disagreeable burden.

"Society dared me," he muttered. "but I know my heart now and I'll do as I please." * * *

After Harry Gordon and Amy Hepburn had been married and had returned from their honeymoon, Harry brought his bride upstairs to his old bachelor's den and seated her in a chair.

"My dear," he said, "I have a confession to make to you. My father once did your father a grievous wrong, and I have made myself the happiest fellow in the world by undoing it. However, as we are not to have any secrets from each other, you must know about this."

A look of astonishment came into Amy's blue eyes as she watched her husband proceed to the closet, throw open the door and go rummaging inside.

"What in the world are you looking for, Harry?" she asked, as he returned to her side.

"I'm looking for something that does not seem to be there—the Gordon family skeleton, Amy. For the first time in 15 years it is not to be found in that closet."

Just then a clanking tread was heard in the hallway without, the door was pushed slowly ajar and the skeleton limped in, supporting itself on a crutch and looking very much the worse for wear.

"There it is!" cried Gordon. "What's the matter with you, old chap? Here, sit down. I want to make you acquainted with my wife."

The family skeleton dropped into a chair and shook until it rattled like a score of castanets.

"I'm done for," it groaned. "You've fixed me, young man. I just dropped in to say good-by forever. But don't introduce me to your wife. We've met before."

"That's so, Harry," said Amy. "I know all about this family skeleton of yours. Don't let it worry you, my dear," and she threw her soft arms about his neck. "Let the dead past bury its dead. If we are happy, isn't that enough?"

"Enough, yes!" And he pressed a rapturous kiss upon her fair cheek.

That kiss pronounced the doom of the Gordon family skeleton. Forthwith it began to fade into the air, finally vanishing and leaving not a wrack behind.—Chicago Herald.

DENMARK'S DESERTED FARMS

They Are Being Reclaimed in a Manner That Is Interesting in New England.

The Howard association has published an interesting leaflet, entitled: "Back to the Land—Denmark's Example." In that country, says London Truth, there is an exodus of the population of the towns back to the land. Partly by state aid, and partly by private enterprise, 2,000 square miles of waste land have been reclaimed, and five-eighths of the national territory is possessed by small freeholders and peasants. Above a hundred people's high schools have been established, where peasantry and working classes of ages from 18 to 25 get board and education for 10s. per week. The Danish farmers have formed cooperative societies for the collection, sale and export of their produce. Danish university and college students have instituted throughout the rural districts free lectures, evening lessons, and committees for promoting popular amusements. In almost every village a public hall has been erected for recreation and social gatherings. In villages where the high school has obtained influence, neither drinking, gambling, nor gross breaches of morals are to be met with; yet the villagers are fond of games, dancing, sports and other recreations.

And what is the result? Denmark has become the second country in the world in regard to average wealth per head, although there are few very rich men. She annually supplies the British market with more than 1,000,000 hundredweight of butter and the same amount of bacon, about 200,000,000 eggs, and scores of thousands of pigs, cattle and horses.

Surely we might take example by this. This produce might equally well be brought into existence in England. But it never will be, so long as our wretched system of education prevails in villages, so long as villagers are divorced from all property in land, and so long as village life remains the dull, dreary thing it is. Let anyone only consider what might have been done for the rural population at home with the £100,000,000 that have been spent in relieving the oppressed millions in the Transvaal.

PARADISE FOR TRAMPS.

For several reasons Australia may be regarded as the ideal abode of the hobo and the tramp, or, as the former is designated in the cities, the larrikin.

The larrikin, like the kangaroo, is peculiar to the Australian continent. In no other country, certainly not in the United States, would he even be permitted to exist.

In appearance, says the Boston Globe, he is undersized in stature, slight in build and sallow in complexion, probably owing to an early excessive use of cigarettes. His attire is unique and unmistakable. He wears a narrow brimmed hat on one side of his head, a short jacket reaching to the hips, pants very tight about the waist to the knees, but spreading out bell-shaped at the ankles to the tips of his shoes. The latter are invariably with high heels.

Singly a desperate coward, but in packs or gangs as he perambulates the sidewalks of Melbourne or Sydney, he becomes a terror to women and children and a menace to anyone he fancies he can insult with impunity. He rarely does any work and is never found out of the cities.

The Australian tramp much resembles the same species in America, only instead of "looking for work," he generally adopts the guise of a prospector. With "billy" or kettle in hand he trudges from one sheep station to another, enforcing hospitality by the fear that if such is not accorded a barn will be found ignited on his departure.

In no country in the world are the unemployed treated with so much consideration by the authorities as in Australia. As the labor vote controls the balance of political parties, and the floating population of unemployed are chary of saying no to a deputation of this class of citizens.

For instance, as has more than once happened, if a body of unemployed should wait upon the minister of the interior with a request for free transportation on the government railroads to some remote district, where they assert work is to be found, the minister, particularly if an election is at hand, has no other recourse but to issue the tickets.

Then, if, when the place is reached, climatic or other conditions are not found to be as conjectured, a pressing request for return passage does not often meet with refusal.

LITTLE GOLD CHEESE.

Meal Product of Valuable Relics Turned Into Cakes.

For 52 years the same two men have been making the same kind of cheeses in the same little old building on Wall street.

Henry Doherty has handled gold meal in the room of the United States assay office since 1849. He prepares it for Cyrus G. Brunner, who for 50 years has stood every day in his corner by the hydraulic press, squeezing gold and silver meal into the cheeses, says the Washington Star.

Anybody can take gold and silver to the assay office in lots of not less than $100 and have it melted or refined by paying a small charge. It is in the character of the wares thus brought for melting that the human interest of the office is found. Of $100,000,000 of precious metal melted last year about $7,000,000 was old silver. Owing to the fact that plated ware is accepted, the silver bullion made the greatest bulk. It consisted of old watch cases and abandoned plate. An odd feature is that often a so-called old family, forced to part with its venerable plate through untoward circumstances, will have costly and artistic forms turned into mere bullion before it is offered on the market.

Where there is no especial artistic value in the old plate, it is wise, from a business standpoint, to melt it before selling it. Dealers in old plate buy it for its bullion value only. They, being expert, can tell what this value is, and, if they be not exactly honest, might get much the best of the bargain. But when it is melted in the assay office each bar is stamped with the exact weight and fineness, so that a child might take it to market and get its value.

Not old plate alone goes into the melting pots of Uncle Sam. Every year hundreds of sets of silverware that have never left the manufacturers' hands are melted up. These are wares that have been made in excess of the demand and have gone out of fashion, so that the best way to realize on them is to remelt them and reform them. Some manufacturers do this, melting themselves, but the government does it well and cheaply, so gets much of it to do.

In the smaller bits of gold and silver that come to the mint are rings. It is surprising how many love tokens find their way there to be purified in flame. Toys, engagement rings, presentation badges and odd coins are mingled into a common mass in the furnace. Often articles of extreme value come to the furnaces in these odd lots, but even if the assay office employees recognize a treasure they may not save it without the consent of the owner.

The melting furnaces are run from eight o'clock to four daily. The fuel is gas, aided by a blast. To melt silver it takes 1,300 degrees Fahrenheit; to melt gold, 2,500 degrees. This heat will turn the metal into liquid in 75 minutes. One furnace will run off 25,000 ounces of gold in a day, or 5,000 of silver. Molten silver looks like weak tea heavy with sugar sirup; gold like rare old Tokay. The ordinary mold is of the size of a building brick. It is of steel, the inner surface highly polished and smeared with sweet lard. As the rich flood falls into it the lard springs into flame and keeps on burning after the metal has come to rest, making a little wall of fire about it. Each mold when full will hold 200 ounces of silver or 300 of gold. The metal is left to stand in the molds but a moment, for the instant it is hard enough to stand alone it is turned out on a metal table. At first it is a deep red, then gradually cools and assumes its proper color. The weight and fineness are stamped before the bricks leave this table.

Now the gold and silver meal has been left behind in the bottoms of the respective pots and vats. Each metal is treated alike. It is collected from pot and vat with copper hose and put into tubs, where hot water is poured upon it while it is stirred with a wooden ladle. The washing process is kept up until the water that runs off is clean. Then it is put into large tubs and hot water is run over it with a hose. The water run off in this washing is carefully collected and strained ten times, so that no particle of precious metal escapes.

After the meal has been washed clean it goes to the 200-ton hydraulic press, where it is pressed into cheeses a foot in diameter and three inches thick. This pressure is to dry it. As the mighty plunger descends on it water is forced out on all sides through minute slits. This water is strained through muslin ten times. The finished cheese is worth, in gold, $25,000; in silver, $800. It looks hard and dry, but it still contains so much water that if put into one of the superheated furnaces the atoms of water would be converted into steam and explode. So the cheeses are lined up in a drying vat heated with steam and with hot steam pipes as shelves. There they are baked ten hours, after which they are ready for any use.

8173—Ladies' Fancy Waist.
32, 34, 36, 38 and 40 inch bust

LADIES' FANCY WAIST NO. 8173.

Heavy cream lace, Russian green velvet and soft Liberty satin are combined to make this charming dinner bodice.

It is mounted on a glove-fitted lining which closes in the center front, the seams and darts being featherboned. The backs are drawn smoothly across the shoulders, with tiny plaits in the center at the belt.

The full vest is permanently attached to the lining and closes in the center front. The boleros of lace are edged with velvet and drawn together at the bust under a huge rosette of velvet ribbon. A similar rosette adorns the velvet girdle.

The waist may be made high neck and completed with a standing collar if preferred. The bell sleeves are shaped with inside seams only, fitting the arm closely from armhole to elbow and flaring at the lower edge over full undersleeves of Liberty satin. These are shirred in the middle to form two puffs and are drawn in close at the hand on a narrow wristband.

Taffeta, panne, peau de sole, silk poplin and crepe de chine are appropriate fabrics for this stylish bodice with allover applique, lace, embroidered chiffon or mousseline and fine gold braid for decoration. The bolero may be made entirely of one material and trimmed with fancy gimp or braid to give the double effect shown in the illustration.

To make the waist in the medium size will require one and one-half yards of embroidery thirty-six inches wide with one and one-half yards of silk and three-fourths yard of velvet. The pattern, number 8173, is cut in sizes for a thirty-two, thirty-four, thirty-six, thirty-eight and forty-inch bust measure.

BLOOD

We live by our blood, and on it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain, in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits, no cheer, no spring, when rest is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food, to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like. SCOTT & BOWNE, 409 Pearl street, New York.

THE STAGE SHEPHERDESS.

Her golden curls are clustered
Upon her forehead fair,
But when shades of night have gathered
They'll be mustered on a chair.

WINE OF CARDUI

How a Woman Suffers.

HOWELL, IND., Nov. 28.
I will always praise Wine of Cardui. It has done me more good than all the medicines I have ever taken in my life. Please send a book about female diseases to the ladies whose names I enclose.

Mrs. MINNIE STODGHILL.

WINE OF CARDUI

It isn't necessary for a woman to give particulars. When she says she has "female troubles", other women know what that means. It means days and nights of endless suffering. It means headaches which no tongue can describe. It means that terrible bearing and dragging down in the lower abdomen. It means agonizing backache, and shoulder ache, and arm ache, and aches in the lower limbs. It means nerves on edge—the blues—despondency and loss of hope. It means debilitating drains that the doctors call leucorrhoea. It means martyrdom—sometimes even death seems preferable. And still Wine of Cardui will utterly put those diseases and pains to rout. It has cured thousands of cases when nothing else on earth would. To the budding woman, to the bride, to the wife, to the expectant mother, to those going through the Change of Life, this Vegetable Wine is a blessing.

RHEUM/ TISM—CATARRH—DISEASES CURED BY B. B. B.

It is the deep-seated, obstinate cases of catarrh and rheumatism that B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) cures. It matters not what other treatments, doctors, sprays, liniments, medicated air blood purifiers, have failed to do, B. B. B. always promptly reaches the real cause and roots out and drives from the bones, joints, mucous membrane, and entire system the specific poison in the blood that causes rheumatism and catarrh. B. B. B. is the only remedy strong enough to do this and cure and so there can never be a return to the symptoms. Don't give up hope, but try B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm) or 3'Bs.

For sale by druggists and Howard Gardner, in Greensboro, at $1 per large bottle, or 6 large bottles (full treatment) $5. To prove our faith in B. B. B. we will send a trial bottle free to sufferers, so they may test the remedy at our expense. Address Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga.

PREVENTED A TRAGEDY.

Timely information given Mrs. George Long, of New Straitsville, O., prevented a dreadful tragedy and saved two lives. A frightful cough had kept her awake every night. She tried many remedies and doctors but steadily grew worse until urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery. One bottle cured her, and she writes this marvelous medicine also cured Mr. Long of a severe attack of pneumonia. Such cures are positive proof of the matchless merit of this grand remedy for curing all throat, chest and lung troubles. Only 50c and $1.00. Every bottle guaranteed. Trial bottles free at C. E. Holton's drug store.

This season there is a large death rate among children from croup and lung troubles. Prompt action will save the little ones from these terrible diseases. We know of nothing so certain to give instant relief as One Minute Cough Cure. It can also be relied upon in gripe and all throat and lung troubles of adults. Pleasant to take. Howard Gardner.

STORY OF A SLAVE.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. Geo. D. Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters, she is wonderfully improved and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle-working medicine is a godsend to weak, sickly, run-down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by C. E. Holton, druggist.

When threatened by pneumonia or any other lung trouble, prompt relief is necessary, as it is dangerous to delay. We would suggest that One Minute Cough Cure be taken as soon as indications of having taken cold are noticed. It cures quickly and its early use prevents consumption. Howard Gardner.

MOUNT ARARAT ASCENDED.

The Task Was Recently Accomplished by a Party of Russian Scientists.

The Ararat mountains in Armenia comprise two peaks situated seven miles apart. They are known as Great and Little Ararat, and are respectively 17,260 and 14,320 feet above the plain. They partially belong to three countries, Russia, Turkey and Persia. The mountains are covered on the tops with perpetual snow, ice and glaciers. The summit of Great Ararat was reached in 1829 by Prof. Parrot, says the Scientific American, and on September 2, 1900, a member of the Russian Geographical society named Peoggenpohl ascended the peak with a considerable party. The difficulties of the ascent are very great, and his successful expedition will be welcome news in geographical circles. Ascents are rare, having been made in 1834, 1843, 1845, 1850 and 1856. Little Ararat is even more difficult to climb, as its declivities are greater and steeper, its form being almost conical. It is believed to be the spot where the ark rested, but there is a tradition that Mount Judi in southern Armenia was the spot. The mountain is of volcanic origin and was in eruption in 1785, and in 1840 there was a vast discharge of sulphurous vapors from its sides, and a tremendous earthquake shook the surrounding country. There is considerable literature devoted to the mountain.

Distilled Iron Will Not Rust.

Distilling various metals, Kahlbaum, of Basle, has found that a number of them that usually rust quickly—like iron or copper—are so purified that it becomes difficult to oxidize them. Iron is a beautiful silver-white metal that does not tarnish in the air. Tin proves to be the most difficult of the common metals to distill, as in a vacuum it does not begin to pass over until a temperature of 2912 degrees is reached.—Invention.

Accidents in Iron Mines.

During 1898, there were 226 accidents in 19 mines on the iron range in Minnesota, resulting in deaths averaging 1 to every 193 employed. During 1899 there were 421 accidents, with the same average rate of fatalities.—Mining Journal.
